Each time [a believer] partakes of the elements, he reminds himself that, but for the death of Christ on his behalf, he would still be in his sins, lost, guilty and undone. As, on the table, he sees the bread and the cup... he realizes that this speaks eloquently of the death of his Divine Substitute who, by His death, satisfied every claim of a holy law, and every demand of a holy God on his behalf. Thus, each Lord's day, the believer is brought back to the great fundamental fact of the gospel, and the vital truth of Christianity, the death of Christ. As he takes the bread and the cup, he says, in effect: "Lord Jesus, but for Thy death on my behalf, I would still be dead in my trespasses and sins, and on my way to a lost eternity. I hereby confess that my present salvation and my future blessedness is due entirely to Thy death for me." As [the believers] take the Lord's supper each week, they are brought back to the great foundational truth of the gospel… Thus Calvary is ever kept fresh in their minds.
